

Cell Size

What determines the size of a cell?

Why?

Sometimes bigger is better—tall basketball players, more closet space, and savings accounts may come to mind. What about cells? Does having big cells make an organism bigger or better? Would having larger cells be an advantage to an organism? If so, why do cells divide rather than continue growing? Maybe there is an advantage to being small.

Model 1 – Investigating Cell Size

1. Are the cells shown in Model 1 plant or animal cells? Explain your answer.

The cells shown in Model 1 are animal cells because there is no central vacuole in the cell which shows that it's not a plant cell since the vacuole is the largest component in a plant cell.

2. Label Cell B in Model 1 with the following structures.

cell membrane	cytoplasm	nucleus
ribosomes	vacuole	mitochondria

3. Compare the smaller cell in Model 1 to the larger cell in Model 1.

a. Which cell has a larger surface area (more cell membrane surface)?

Cell B has a larger surface area because it is able to contain more organelles and still have more space, which means there's more cytosol, and thus, more surface area.

b. Which cell has more channels in its cell membrane that can transport molecules (nutrients, oxygen, and waste products) in and out of the cell?

Cell B has more channels because it has more gaps and spaces within the cell membrane, allowing for more space for molecules to be transported inside and outside the cell.
