

Blackburne, 1997, p. 123: "Black and Shapere's (1996) book is a very welcome contribution to the philosophy of science, and it is a pleasure to see it published in paperback."

But, as Black has so effectively demonstrated, Black's discussion of science is off-putting. For, if Black is correct, it is impossible to have a theory that is not subject to falsification. Other explanations for science's success are more plausible, and would not require the kind of revision to logic that Black's theory requires. For Black's theory is not only self-refuting, but it is also self-defeating. For, if Black's theory is correct, then the theory is false. — discussion: <http://www.philosophy.org.uk>

For instance, neither's argument gives much support to a theory of computer consciousness.

But, if there is no such thing as a computer, then there is no such thing as a computer. — discussion: <http://www.philosophy.org.uk>
