

PRESCHOOL HOME PROJECTS SAMPLE LETTER TO PARENTS

Dear Parents,

We're excited to announce some fun, educational home projects for your preschooler! These activities will reinforce what we're learning in class. They're designed to be engaging and easy to do at home.

This month's focus is on shapes and colors. We'll be working on identifying different shapes and learning their names. Your child will also be exploring a variety of colors and learning to mix them.

Please feel free to contact us if you have any questions or need further clarification.

We look forward to seeing the amazing creations your child makes!

Sincerely,

The Preschool Team

Sample Preschool Letters To Parents:

Implementing Positive Behavior Support Systems in Early Childhood and Elementary Settings Melissa Stormont, 2008

The book's strengths are its practical information and the specific ways of looking at expectations and developing a common language. The forms included will be of great benefit to school teams. Susan Safarik, Supervisor, Department of Special Education, Lincoln Public Schools, NE. Provides a lot of research and breaks down the processes for implementing positive behavior supports effectively in schools. Step by step directions, sample forms, and examples make the processes easy to incorporate and understand. Julia DeGarmo, Special Education Specialist, Columbus City Schools, OH. Learn how to teach and support appropriate behavior and build confidence in young children. This easy to read resource presents the Programwide Schoolwide Positive Behavioral Support (PW-SWPBS) system, a preventive research-based approach that helps educators teach classroom behavior skills the same way they teach academic skills. The authors outline the PW-SWPBS model, describe the core practices, and provide case examples to aid implementation. Key features of this instruction-based system include: Differing levels of intervention to meet individual student needs; Clearly stated behavioral expectations; Consistent acknowledgment of students' mastery of expectations; Systematic use of consequences for problem behavior. This user-friendly text makes the principles of PW-SWPBS easy to apply for educators who are committed to helping young students establish positive behavioral habits that will make learning a joy for all. Literacy, Home and School Peter Hannon, 2013-10-14

Parental involvement in the teaching of reading and writing has often lagged behind practice though schools in many countries now recognise the importance of parental involvement. The ideas presented in this book offer new ways of thinking about parental involvement and should interest both researchers and practitioners. It relates the recent growth of involvement to broader considerations of the nature of literacy and historical exclusion of parents from the curriculum. Descriptions are given of key findings from research into pre-school literacy work with parents and parents hearing children read and a framework to underpin practice is offered. The author gives a critique of evaluation methods in the field and suggests how parental involvement should be evaluated together with a view of research findings to date and issues needing further study. The book concludes with an appraisal of what was learned from research and what needs further enquiry.

The Science of Reading Margaret J. Snowling, Charles Hulme, Kate Nation, 2022-05-12. Provides an overview of state of the art research on the science of reading, revised and updated throughout. The Science of Reading presents the most recent advances in the study of reading and related skills. Bringing together contributions from a multidisciplinary team of experts, this comprehensive volume reviews theoretical approaches, stage models of reading, cross-linguistic studies of reading, reading instruction, the neurobiology of reading, and more. Divided into six parts, the book explores word recognition processes in skilled reading, learning to read and spell, reading comprehension and its development, reading and writing in different languages, developmental and acquired reading disorders, and the social, biological, and environmental factors of literacy. The second edition of The Science of Reading is extensively revised to reflect contemporary theoretical insights and methodological advances Two entirely new chapters on co occurrence and complexity are accompanied by reviews of recent findings and discussion of future trends and research directions Updated chapters cover the development of reading and language in preschools the social correlates of reading experimental research on sentence processing learning to read in alphabetic orthographies comorbidities that occur frequently with dyslexia and other central topics Demonstrates how different knowledge sources underpin reading processes using a wide range of methodologies Presents critical appraisals of theoretical and computational models of word recognition and evidence based research on reading intervention Reviews evidence on skilled visual word recognition the role of phonology methods for identifying dyslexia and the molecular genetics of reading and language Highlights the importance of language as a foundation for literacy and as a risk factor for developmental dyslexia and other reading disorders Discusses learning to read in different types of writing systems with a language impairment and in variations of the home literacy environment Describes the role of contemporary analytical tools such as dominance analysis and quantile regression in modelling the development of reading and comprehension Part of the acclaimed Wiley Blackwell Handbooks of Developmental Psychology series the second edition of The Science of Reading A Handbook remains an invaluable resource for advanced students researchers and specialist educators looking for an up to date overview of the field

Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science

Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Keith Topping, Sheila Wolfendale, 2017-11-28 Parental involvement in children s education is a subject of growing interest and recent legislation in both the UK and USA has given formal recognition of parents rights Learning to read is an obvious area where parents can do a great deal to help and some schools have had programmes for parental involvement in reading for some time However recent research has shown the considerable benefit in having carefully structured systems for parental involvement This book presents a review of past and current good practice in this field Details of a wide range of schemes developed in local areas are given in a series of short contributed papers which are grouped into sub sections of Part 2 according to the type of project Part 3 is essentially a manual of materials and methods The emphasis throughout the book is on service delivery to all children although there is of course considerable discussion of remedial reading and children with special needs The book should appeal to a wide audience in education educational administration and educational psychology
