⚠ WARNING

- In order to prevent electric shock or instrument failure, do not turn on the power switch until all the wiring is completed.
- If failure or error of this instrument could result in a critical accident of the system, install an external protection circuit to prevent such an accident.
- In order to prevent electric shock or instrument failure, protect power line and the input/output lines from high currents by using fuses with

References

- (13) For the three-phase supply, use the specified compensation wires.
- (14) For RTD input, use leads with low resistance and having an resistance difference among the 3 leads.
- (15) Connect input signal wiring away from instrument panel, electrical equipment panel and heat lines to avoid noise induction.
- (16) For the RTD input, the sensor wiring is not to be influenced by noise from the electrical equipment panel. If the instrument tray is affected by external noise, an noise filter should be used.
- (17) Connect the distance between busbar (power supply rail) placed. The closer the distance between the rail, the more effective for noise reduction.
- (18) Install the noise filter on the panel which is already grounded and distribute the wiring distance between the noise filter and rail and the instrument power terminals.
- (19) Do not install busbar and switches on the filter output signal since this may reduce filter effect.
- (20) The ground wiring must be made with low resistance wire.
- (21) About 10 to 20 cm and more as the compensation for the ground output after power on. Use a cross table when the output line is used for an external electric circuit.
- (22) If the measured SLS has power supply switch ON/Off buses, it therefore, install the fuse box for the instrument.
- (23) Recommended fuse rating: Rated voltage: 240 V AC Rated current: 1 A Fuse type: Time-lag fuse
- (24) For the instrument with power supply of 24 V AC, connect the fuse to supply the power from SLS's circuit.
- (25) The instrument is intended to be used under the following recommended conditions: 100°C or more.
