

Control of Blood Sugar Levels

What hormones are involved in the maintenance of blood sugar?

Why?

Our bodies require a constant supply of glucose for its energy. The pancreas is the source from which glucose is released into circulation. Blood glucose levels are lower than 100 after glucose has been metabolized in that single cell. A homeostatic control of blood glucose levels maintains the blood glucose levels low. This process involves negative feedback, the control of insulin and glucagon. In summary, hormones regulate the glucose metabolism and energy use in the body.

Model 1 - Hormonal Control of Glucose

1. The pancreas secretes insulin and glucagon, and maintains the glucose levels.
2. When glucose levels drop, the pancreas secretes glucagon, which stimulates the liver to release glucose into the blood.
3. When glucose levels rise, the pancreas secretes insulin, which stimulates the liver to store glucose as glycogen.
4. According to the graph in Model 1, what happens to blood glucose levels after a meal?
