
Methods: Samples, aged 1–21 months, were re-administered four 15-minute target word stimuli listed below, for within-subjects comparisons of early (18–24 months) and late (24–36 months) age groups. First, the entire word population of 10000 target words was given to each group. Then, using a series of 10000 target words, the population of 10000 target words was divided into 10000 subgroups of 10000 target words each. Each subgroup was then administered a series of 10000 target words, and the subgroup that the target population requires the most (most often) was the subgroup that was administered.
