(3) Insert a white wire between the original joint and the welding tape to make more regular joint locations (Fig. 10). When applying the white wire between the joint locations, use the welding tape, instead of the wire, to hold the wire firmly against the original bonding. It then is not clear, however, if the welding tape can remove all stress (original joint has a typical 4000-psi tensile strength), or only from one side of the original joint. The weld strength may be 1000-psi, and the joint strength may be 1000-psi.
