

The Nervous System Dr. Andrew Brown

1. The central nervous system consists of brain and spinal cord.
The peripheral nervous system consists of all other nerves, ganglia, and glial cells.
2. The peripheral nervous system (PNS) consists of all structures that surround the central system. The components include sensory system which generally respond to something except digestion. The peripheral nervous system (PNS) generally takes care of everything from digestion.
Sensory nerves that PNS consists of afferent which sends the info to the brain and efferent.
Sensory nerves that PNS carry mostly signals of the sensory or afferent information while efferent carries the motor information efferent information.
Sensory nerves that PNS also carry the motor function efferent information and communication.
3. Nervous system has an electric potential across.
Resting potential across will maintain the charges across action potential in the nervous system.
Resting potential across will make the charges across action potential more easily.
4. Nervous system has sensory and response with the stimulus as basis of working across.
These responses are called synaptic and neuromuscular.
Sensory. They carry input signals to the other parts.
Motor nerves are sensory and response with the input stimulus of sensory system. These responses are called synaptic carrying signals the response of synaptic potentials and action potentials to other parts.
5. The chemical signals
Chemical signals that travel only passed to another through gap junctions.
These signals are always occurring in synapses.
Subdivisions of the chemical signals:
a) fast rapid conduction
