

An artistic illustration of two European Waxwings perched on a gnarled tree branch. The birds have a distinctive reddish-brown crest, a black mask around their eyes, and a black collar at the base of their beaks. Their plumage is primarily a warm, peachy-brown color. The wings show a mix of grey, black, and white feathers, with a prominent yellow patch on the underside of the tail. They are surrounded by clusters of small, bright red berries on thin, leafless branches. The background is a plain, light cream color.
