Technology Assessment of Automation Trends in the Modular Home Industry Philip H. Mitchell,2009 This report provides an assessment of technology used in manufacturing modular homes in the United States and that used in the German prefabricated wooden home industry It is the first step toward identifying the research needs in automation and manufacturing methods that will facilitate mass customization in the home manufacturing industry Within the United States a relatively low level of technology was found in domestic modular home manufacturers Raw material transportation was mostly manual manually operated saws sized raw materials cranes were used to move subassemblies and modules were pushed by hand or with a battery powered pusher German prefabricated home manufacturers used closed panels to construct walls roofs and floors rather than modular construction Three levels of automation were identified manual semi automated and fully automated Manual production methods were similar to those found in the United States In semi automated factories automated machinery was used but an operator was required to manually load unload and start the machine The fully automated factories had equipment capable of machining and transferring panel components and placing and fastening components together Such investment in automation is risky in the cyclic housing industry The modular factory has elevated homebuilding from a craft to mass production but flexibility is reduced and significant customization is difficult Future research should examine the cost effectiveness of using high levels of automation software and equipment in the U S homebuilding industry and whether it can profitably provide the manufacturing flexibility for mass customization Alternatively the use of lean manufacturing in modular home factories to realize the same benefits needs to be examined designing large local area networks according to business or organizational needs rather than from a product perspective Author and independent network design consultant Kevin Dooley outlines top down network design for building a technological infrastructure to fit your organization s requirements a process far more effective and cost efficient than fitting the organization to the parameters of a shrink wrapped proprietary solution Dooley argues that the design of a network is largely independent of the products used Whether you use a Cisco or Juniper router the same security issues and protocols apply The questions he addresses in this book are need specific Do I use a router or a switch Should I route between switched areas or switch between routed areas Designing Large Scale LANs covers everything from security bandwidth and scalability to network reliability which includes backup redundancy and points of failure Specific technologies are analyzed in detail network topologies routing and switching strategies wireless virtual LANs firewalls and gateways security Internet protocols bandwidth and multicast services The book also discusses proprietary technologies that are ubiquitous such as Cisco s IOS and Novell s IPX This complete guide to top down network design will help you choose the right network solutions If you re designing large scale networks and need expert advice and guidance look no further than Designing Large
