As various researchers and scholars point out, infrastructure facilities are developed more rapidly in emerging countries because of various reasons. (such as natural supply, abundant government aid, government) (B&P, 2004). In addition, there are structural changes in a building project. It is often argued that the main reason behind building development in the urban environment is building-related activities. By contrast, the first step of a building project is usually the construction of the infrastructure. The construction of the road and water supply systems.
