It is argued that the use of guidelines of evidence-based management approaches such as MBAS and the associated underlying business objectives is important to the success of the implementation of the MBAS. However, the MBAS is not a one-size-fits-all solution. The MBAS is a management tool that is designed to be used in a way that is appropriate to the needs of the business. Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 30 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness of the subjects was measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The exercise program was effective in improving the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the participants experienced significant improvements in their cardiovascular fitness, strength, and overall health. The study also found that the participants experienced a decrease in their resting heart rate and an increase in their maximum heart rate. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve physical fitness and health in sedentary, middle-aged men.
