

Do Not Stand

Do not stand at my grave and weep;
I am not there, I do not sleep.
I am a thousand winds that blow.
I am the diamond glints on the snow.
I am the sunlight on ripened grain.
I am the gentle autumn rain.
When you awaken in the morning's hush
I am the swift uplifting rush
Of quiet birds in circled flight.
I am the soft stars that shine at night.
Do not stand at my grave and cry;
I am not there, I did not die.

Gone to the Grave Abby Burnett, 2015-04-03 Before there was a death care industry where professional funeral directors offered embalming and other services, residents of the Arkansas Ozarks and for that matter people throughout the South buried their own dead. Every part of the complicated, labor-intensive process was handled within the deceased's community. This process included preparation of the body for burial, making a wooden coffin, digging the grave, and overseeing the burial ceremony, as well as observing a wide variety of customs and superstitions. These traditions, especially in rural communities, remained the norm up through the end of World War II, after which a variety of factors, primarily the loss of manpower and the rise of the funeral industry, brought about the end of most customs. Gone to the Grave is a meticulous autopsy of this now vanished way of life and death, documents mourning and practical rituals through interviews, diaries, and reminiscences, obituaries, and a wide variety of other sources. Abby Burnett covers attempts to stave off death, passings that for various reasons could not be mourned according to tradition, factors contributing to high maternal and infant mortality, and the ways in which loss was expressed through obituaries and epitaphs. A concluding chapter examines early undertaking practices and the many angles funeral industry professionals worked to convince the public of the need for their services.
