

ROCK CANDY SCIENCE EXPERIMENT

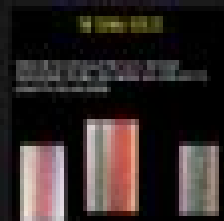

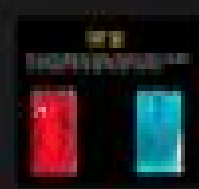

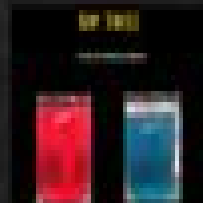

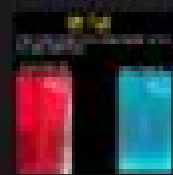

OBJECTIVE:
To observe the effect of temperature on the growth of rock candy.

THEORY:
Rock candy is a type of candy made from sugar. It is made by dissolving sugar in water and then allowing the solution to crystallize.

QUESTION:
Will the temperature affect the growth of rock candy?

HYPOTHESIS:
The sugar crystals will grow faster in room temperature than cold temperature.

THEORY:
The theory is that the temperature affects the growth of rock candy. The higher the temperature, the faster the growth. This is because the higher the temperature, the more energy the molecules have, and the more energy they have, the faster they move. This causes the molecules to collide more often, which leads to the formation of crystals.

CONCLUSION:
The conclusion is that the temperature does affect the growth of rock candy. The higher the temperature, the faster the growth.

 explores relationships between experimental research, normal development and interventions with early infantile autism as a reference model of relatively unambiguous abnormal development. Sponsored by the Treatment and Education of Autistic and related Communications handicapped Children (TEACCH) Project at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the colloquium tackled the challenge of facilitating communications among scientists of different disciplines working in a specialized area. The meeting proved successful in generating an interplay and information exchange among scientists of diverse academic and professional orientation who if not completely able to agree on common factors did nevertheless achieve awareness and clarification of their differences. The TEACCH conference and this volume have implications for all research efforts within and outside the domain of mental health. This is particularly so at a time of limited dollar resources for research support. The present and foreseeable future represent such a time when communication among fields, resource competition between basic and applied research, biomedical versus psychosocial research and the question of research utilization assume a new commanding significance. Thus the question of accountability for research has come to the fore.
