Physical Setting Earth Science Review Answers 2013:

Cretaceous Climate Events and Short-Term Sea-Level Changes M. Wagreich, M.B. Hart, B. Sames, I.O. Yilmaz, 2020
Sea level constitutes a critical planetary boundary for geological processes and human life. Sea level fluctuations during major greenhouse phases are still enigmatic and strongly discussed in terms of changing climate systems. The geological record of the Cretaceous greenhouse period provides a deep time view on greenhouse phase Earth system processes that facilitates a much better understanding of the causes and consequences of global geologically short term sea level changes. In particular, Cretaceous hothouse periods can serve as a laboratory to better understand a near future greenhouse Earth. This volume presents high resolution sea level records from globally distributed sedimentary archives of the Cretaceous involving a large group of scientists from the International Geoscience Programme IGCP 609. Marine to non marine sedimentary successions were analysed for revised age constraints, the correlation of global palaeoclimate shifts and sea level changes tested for climate driven cyclicities and correlated within a high resolution stratigraphic framework of the Geological Timescale. For hothouse periods the hypothesis of significant global groundwater related sea level change i.e. aquifer eustasy as a major process is reviewed and substantiated. Sigda, 2011-01-01 Microbiomes of the Built Environment National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, National Academy of Engineering, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Health and Medicine Division, Division on Earth and Life

Studies, Board on Infrastructure and the Constructed Environment, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Board on Life Sciences, Committee on Microbiomes of the Built Environment: From Research to Application, 2017-11-06 People's desire to understand the environments in which they live is a natural one. People spend most of their time in spaces and structures designed, built, and managed by humans, and it is estimated that people in developed countries now spend 90 percent of their lives indoors. As people move from homes to workplaces, traveling in cars and on transit systems, microorganisms are continually with and around them. The human-associated microbes that are shed along with the human behaviors that affect their transport and removal make significant contributions to the diversity of the indoor microbiome. The characteristics of healthy indoor environments cannot yet be defined, nor do microbial, clinical, and building researchers yet understand how to modify features of indoor environments such as building ventilation systems and the chemistry of building materials in ways that would have predictable impacts on microbial communities to promote health and prevent disease. The factors that affect the environments within buildings, the ways in which building characteristics influence the composition and function of indoor microbial communities, and the ways in which these microbial communities relate to human health and well-being are extraordinarily complex and can be explored only as a dynamic interconnected ecosystem by engaging the fields of microbial biology and ecology, chemistry, building science, and human physiology. This report reviews what is known about the intersection of these disciplines and how new tools may facilitate advances in understanding the ecosystem of built environments, indoor microbiomes, and effects on human health and well-being. It offers a research agenda to generate the information needed so that stakeholders with an interest in understanding the impacts of built environments will be able to make more informed decisions.
