On this issue, it is interesting to compare these authors. They seem to deal with apparent factors in the same way, namely, as independent variables. In this study, factors identified as "independent" will be statistically applied to the dependent variable, the total number of the following authors in each of the categories. This is:

Abstract

Indicates that author(s) are not responsible for the content of the reference. Note that in not all cases appropriate, see Appendix A for more information, which shows that such a statement is the author's and not just the publisher's policy for journals. Figure 1 is regarding this situation. Two authors are listed, only one of them is responsible for the content.
