and turn those frowns upside down," said Ms. Carroll. "We had six outdoor stations, we'll need six indoor games to replace them. I'll divide the class into six groups. Each group will come up with a different activity." Fifteen minutes later, Ms. Carroll typed an email to the other teachers about the last-minute changes.

The class headed to the gym. They stacked equipment against one wall. Then, at their teacher's direction, the kindergarten classes, one group by group, began their activities.

In the primary pod, another group measured bean bags and arranged the bean bags in a line near the principal's office. Kids placed bean bags in a basket of balls against one wall.

Between their knees, the first-grade hall, yet another group lined up bean bags for "Boro buckets." In the second-grade hall, another group placed a bag of bean bags in a line.

And Priah's group placed a bag of bean bags in a line. When the teacher would give the signal, the groups would compete to see which group could move the most bean bags in the least amount of time.

When the field day was over, the teachers directed the students to the gym. The gym was filled with shrieks and laughter. The field day was a success.

Field Day

By Brenda Kovach

Mario pulled a thick rope out from under a gymnastics mat. "I found what we need for the tug-of-war!" he shouted. "Great, bring it over here," said Ms. Carroll. She pointed to a space on the floor between a set of orange cones and a stack of buckets.

"Looks like we're all set for field day," Mario told his best friend, Priah. Smiling, they bumped fists.

"Field day is the perfect way to spend the last day of school," Priah said. Mario nodded in agreement. "And planning field day makes it even better."

"Time to head back to the classroom and pack up," Ms. Carroll called. "We'll haul all this stuff out to the playground tomorrow morning."

That night, Mario dreamed about field day. As he pulled himself out of bed with all his might, he heard a jet fly overhead. He woke up, and he realized he had to see his teacher the next day.
