

Periodic Trends Practice

Atomic Radius

The distance from the nucleus of one bonded atom.

Electronegativity

How much an atom "wants" electrons or the atom's tendency to attract electrons.

Ionization Energy

The amount of energy required to remove electrons from an atom.

Electron Affinity

The amount of energy released when a neutral gaseous atom gains an electron.

Driving Question

How can the periodic table be used to predict atomic characteristics such as atomic radius, electronegativity, ionization energy, and electron affinity?

Describe what causes this trend...

Shielding?

What is shielding? What effect does it have on the periodic trends defined above?

Shielding occurs when inner electrons block out the positive pull of the nucleus, reducing the effective pull on the outer electrons. This causes the atomic radius to increase, electronegativity to decrease, ionization energy to decrease, and electron affinity to also decrease.
