Praxis Study Guide Teaching 204:

Principle, Praxis, and the Politics of Educational Reform in Meiji Japan Mark Lincicome, 1995-04-01 Scholars of modern Japan agree that education played a crucial role in that country's rapid modernization during the Meiji period 1868-1912. With few exceptions, however, Western approaches to the subject treat education as an instrument of change controlled by the Meiji political and intellectual elite. Principle Praxis and the Politics of Educational Reform in Meiji Japan offers a corrective to this view. By introducing primary source materials including teaching manuals, educational periodicals, and primary school textbooks missing from most English language works, Mark Lincicome examines an early case of resistance to government control that developed within the community of professional educators. He focuses on what began in 1872 as an attempt by the newly established Ministry of Education to train a corps of professional teachers that could civilize and enlighten the masses in compulsory primary schools. Through the Tokyo Normal School and other new teacher training schools sponsored by the government, the ministry began what it thought was a straightforward technology transfer of the latest teaching methods and materials from the United States and Europe. Little did the ministry realize that it was planting the seeds of broader reform that would challenge not only its underlying doctrine of education but its very authority over education. The reform movement centered around efforts to explicate and disseminate the doctrine of kaihatsushugi (developmental education). Hailed as a modern scientific approach to child education, it rejected rote memorization and passive learning elements of the so-called method of pouring in chunyu knowledge practiced during the preceding Tokugawa period and sought instead to cultivate the unique innate abilities of each child. Orthodox ideas of education, knowledge, and the process by which children learn were challenged. The position and responsibilities of the teacher were enhanced, consequently providing educators with a claim to professional authority and autonomy at a time when the Meiji state was attempting to control every facet of the Japanese school system. Principle Praxis and the Politics of Educational Reform in Meiji Japan analyzes a key element to understanding Meiji development and modern Japan as a whole. Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature Supplement, 1919

Handbook of Research on the Education of School Leaders , Education in an Era of Schooling Christine Edwards-Groves,Peter Grootenboer,Jane Wilkinson,2018-09-07 This book is a Festschrift for Emeritus Professor Stephen Kemmis who has a long and eminent career as an educational researcher and academic spanning over 40 years. His work in curriculum evaluation, critical practice, action research, and practice theory has been influential across all continents of the world. The book examines critical perspectives on educational practice and the participatory nature of action research, including practitioner research, particularly as undertaken by teachers in schools. Including vignettes from Kemmis' colleagues and mentors, it draws on contributions from a range of academics whose scholarship has been inspired, influenced, and initiated by his work. The chapters stem from a range of countries including Australia, Canada, Finland, Sweden, the United Kingdom, United States of America, and Trinidad and Tobago, a testimony to the enduring and global legacy of Kemmis' scholarship. Contributing authors include leading educational research scholars, indigenous elders from Australia, and community leaders concerned with environmental sustainability. The concluding focus of this book turns towards practice theory. Kemmis' later work led to the development of the theory of practice architectures and gave rise to the development of the theory of ecologies of practices in education. Research drawing on the theory of practice architectures and ecologies of practices resulted in the leading text Changing practices, changing education (Kemmis, Wilkinson, Edwards, Groves, Hardy, Grootenboer, Bristol, 2014, Springer), which reports on an Australian investigation of the ecological relationship between student learning, teaching, professional learning, leading, and researching practices. This theory is now being applied to study practices across a wide range of international contexts, sites, and disciplines, including early childhood, school, university, vocational, and training, community, environment, indigenous, cultural, sustainability, and health.
