Disability and World Language Learning Sally Scott, Wade Edwards, 2018-12-21 The release of a report by the Modern Language Association Foreign Languages and Higher Education New Structures for a Changed World focused renewed attention on college foreign language instruction at the introductory level. Frequently the report finds these beginning courses are taught by part-time and untenured instructors, many of whom remain on the fringes of the department with little access to ongoing support, pedagogical training, or faculty development. When students with sensory, cognitive, or physical disabilities are introduced to this environment, the results can be frustrating for both the student who may benefit from specific instructional strategies or accommodations and the instructor who may be ill-equipped to provide inclusive instruction. Soon after the MLA report was published, the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages issued Diversity and Inclusion in Language Programs, a position statement highlighting the value of inclusive classrooms that support diverse perspectives and learning needs. That statement specifies that all students, regardless of background, should have ample access to language instruction. Meanwhile, in the wake of these two publications, the number of college students with disabilities continues to increase, as has the number of world language courses taught by graduate teaching assistants and contingent faculty. Disability and World Language Learning begins at the intersection of these two growing concerns for the diverse learner and for the world language instructor. Devoted to practical classroom strategies based on Universal Design for Instruction, it serves as a timely and valuable resource for all college instructors, adjunct faculty, long-time instructors, and graduate assistants alike confronting a changing and diversifying world language classroom.

Breaking Down the Schoolhouse Doors Stephen V. Newton, 2018-12-14 College students finishing their academic preparation programs face the difficult challenge of transitioning into the teaching profession. In a short period of time they can no longer function as a student themselves and must immediately transform into a professional educator. This can be a difficult challenge for a young person and they need guidance doing this successfully. The one opportunity college students have in gaining practical experience as a teacher is through the student teaching experience. Unfortunately many students squander this critical opportunity and finish their assignment without maximizing their own learning and without capitalizing on professional opportunities that they will need to be hired as a teacher. By building a professional brand name through a thoughtful preservice teaching experience novice educators are better able to survive the application and interview process and secure a teaching position. Capitalizing on the difficult transition point between the college experience and the school environment is more important than ever. When this is done in a systematic and thoughtful manner educators can be certain that they are as prepared as possible to enter the demanding profession of education.
