

Health and Human Development Unit 3 & 4

Unit 3 Outcome 1

prerequisites for health as determined by the WHO including peace, shelter, education, food, income, a stable eco-system, sustainable resources, social justice and equity

Peace

Peace cannot be officially decided solely by treaties it must occur through the dignity rights and capabilities of every man and woman. Peace is more than just the absence of war or conflict, it also means to have access to education, health and essential services, developing sustainably and protecting the plants biodiversity

How it can improve Health Outcomes

- Having access to education, health and essential services, developing sustainability, and protecting that plants biodiversity are all essential for health and wellbeing. as without peace health is challenged greatly.
- No violence or fighting (from living in peace) can reduce the spread of diseases (communicable), death and injury (war, conflict, ect).
- War and conflict (via armed conflict) affects health negatively/positively (depending on living in peace or conflict) both directly and indirectly.
- Countries living in peace are able to utilise all their health recourses; creating better access to health (improving health outcomes e.g. longer life expectancy, less impact from communicable diseases)
- Countries that are war torn or living/experiencing conflict spend little to no money on health? Resources and more on defence; this negative impacts the countries population causing ill health.
