

Prince Albert fell ill and died of typhoid on December 4, 1861 at the age of 42. The Queen was inconsolable with grief and was mourning for the rest of her life. Victoria withdrew from public life after Albert's death, but kept up with her correspondence and continued to give audiences to ministers and official visitors. She decreed that monuments to honour Albert should be built across the country and Empire – including the Albert Memorial. She became very close to John Brown, a servant at Balmoral Castle, even though her children resented him; Victoria was called 'Mummy Brown' in the press but despite this she refused to give up her friendship.

8. _____

The Queen was heartily with worry after her son and heir Edward fell ill with typhoid in February 1871. It came a year after the founding of the French Third Republic, which had provoked anti-monarchist feeling in Britain. When Edward recovered, the Queen used a carefully orchestrated event to boost royal support. She gave a public thanksgiving service and appeared to inspect on the Buckingham Palace balcony. It marked the queen's gradual return to public life.

9. _____

Victoria became the Empress of India to tie the monarchy and Empire closer together. She accepted the title on the advice of her seventh Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli, whose political advice she relied on. She approved of his imperialist policies, which established Britain as the most powerful nation in the world. Her popularity in Britain soared as she became a symbol of empire towards the end of her reign.

10. _____

The Queen received Indian servants to mark her Golden Jubilee year. She promised one, Abdul Karim, to become her personal teacher or 'Munshi'. Karim instructed Victoria in Urdu and Indian affairs and introduced her to Urdu. However just 24 but Victoria was fascinated by India, the country she ruled but would never visit. Politicians and members of the royal household resented his position but despite this, Victoria gave him honours and lands in India and took him with her on visits to the French Riviera.

11. _____

Victoria's jubilee bolstered her reputation. Her face was emblazoned on products from mugs to jars of mustard to mark the occasion. The jubilee celebrations focused on the Queen but also affirmed Britain's place as a global power. Soldiers from the British Empire marched in processions through London. Victoria held a feast, attended by foreign kings and princes, along with the governing heads of Britain's overseas colonies and dominions. During her Diamond Jubilee, in 1893, Victoria celebrated 60 years on the throne. Victoria sent a telegram thanking her subjects across the empire. Street parties were held across Britain, while Sydney Harbour in Australia was lit up with illuminations. In India, 12,000 prisoners were granted a pardon.

12. _____

Victoria died on January 22, 1901, after weeks of ill health. Her son and heir Edward VII and her grandson Emperor Wilhelm II of Germany were at her deathbed. The Queen ruled over an Empire that covered a quarter of the globe with 400 million subjects, but she never forgot the men who supported her. She requested that Albert's dressing gown and a plaster cast of his hand be placed in her coffin. She also asked for a lock of John Brown's hair and his picture to be put in her hand. Lastly she left orders that Abdul Karim be among the principal mourners at her funeral. She was an indomitable monarch who, even at the end, was adept at getting her own way.
