

The Pythagorean Theorem Game

Goal: compete against other players to be the first to go around the game board twice.

To start, each player throws the die. The player with the highest number starts to play. The players play in turns, clockwise.

When it is his turn, the player throws the two dice. The first time the players go around the game board, the numbers obtained on the dice represent the length of both sides ( $a$  and  $b$ ) of a triangle. The player must find the hypotenuse's length to know the number of movements (the integer closest to the answer) to make on the game board. Movements are made clockwise from one square to another. The second time, the players go around the game board, the smallest number obtained after throwing the dice represents the length of side " $a$ " of the triangle and the second number represents the hypotenuse's length. So, the player has to calculate the length of side " $b$ " of the triangle to know the number of movements to make.

If you land on a square "?", take a question card. If you answer the question correctly, you can throw the die again and move forward according to the number of squares indicated by the die. If you do not answer the question correctly, your turn is over, and it is the next player's turn.

If you land on a square with blue writing, follow the instructions.

Each player makes his operations on a sheet of paper and shows them to the other players.

Good luck!
