Freund,2010-04-13 Northern whites in the post World War II era began to support the principle of civil rights so why did many of them continue to oppose racial integration in their communities Challenging conventional wisdom about the growth prosperity and racial exclusivity of American suburbs David M P Freund argues that previous attempts to answer this question have overlooked a change in the racial thinking of whites and the role of suburban politics in effecting this change In Colored Property he shows how federal intervention spurred a dramatic shift in the language and logic of residential exclusion away from invocations of a mythical racial hierarchy and toward talk of markets property and citizenship Freund begins his exploration by tracing the emergence of a powerful public private alliance that facilitated postwar suburban growth across the nation with federal programs that significantly favored whites Then showing how this national story played out in metropolitan Detroit he visits zoning board and city council meetings details the efforts of neighborhood property improvement associations and reconstructs battles over race and housing to demonstrate how whites learned to view discrimination not as an act of racism but as a legitimate response to the needs of the market Illuminating government s powerful yet still hidden role in the segregation of U S cities Colored Property presents a dramatic new vision of metropolitan growth segregation and white identity in modern America
