major aspect of globalisation and the question is examined of whether such chains provide a ladder for development Globalisation has also featured trade imbalances and large capital flows and their causes and effects are examined with respect to China and South Africa respectively This volume will be of great value to students scholars and professionals interested in political economy economic thought climate change sustainability and business studies The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal International Review of Applied Economics

Depletion Shirin M. Rai, 2024-07-17 When thinking about the work of caring for others we often neglect the human cost born by those performing this care Feminists have long talked about the ways in which unpaid work particularly performed in the home is habitually undervalued by society but the work of caring for people both paid and unpaid can also take a toll on the health of individuals households and communities when we give more than we receive This lopsided gap between outflows and inflows as this book argues is depletion In Depletion Shirin M Rai examines the human costs of care work and how these are reproduced across the boundaries of class race gender and generation Depletion can be physical as measured by the body mass index exhaustion sleeplessness and vital health signs It can also be mental manifesting as self doubt guilt and apprehension and the failure to take time for oneself family friends and community Moreover depletion has effects that extend well beyond the individual to households and communities Including case studies from different parts of the world and building on various methodologies Rai looks at the costs of care work or what she calls social reproduction in several forms biological reproduction unpaid work in the home and cultural and ideological work necessary to maintain social relations beyond the household Various chapters examine the costs of commuting to work and for care the value of unpaid work performed by women of different classes the costs of household work performed by children and the costs to communities when local economies are challenged by corporate interests Lastly Rai argues that depletion must be recognized in order for it to be reversed the struggles to reverse depletion are struggles for a good life generative of new imaginings of how care work both draining and joyful can be reorganized for a better future for all

Ownership and Governance of Companies Jonathan Michie, Vishnu Padayachee, 2021-06-29 Apartheid South Africa was often thought to run in the interests of the business elite Yet 27 years after apartheid those business interests remain largely entrenched Why Did the South African business community play a role in engineering this outcome perhaps recognising the apartheid era was over and jumping ship in time Conversely the mission of the ANC was widely perceived to be to shift wealth and power into the hands of the whole community Yet despite black empowerment measures corporate ownership remains largely in white hands and certainly in the hands of an elite few even though no longer restricted to whites This picture is replicated across the global south where corporate ownership tends to be concentrated in the hands of an elite rather than being more democratically spread Why have alternative corporate forms not been pursued more vigorously with ownership in the hands of customers employees and local communities In the case of South Africa where the majority of customers and employees are black this could have delivered on the ANC's mission to replace the apartheid era with a democratic one in terms of wealth incomes and power as well as in terms of voting and civic rights This edited volume explores all these questions and looks at ways to align corporate forms with economic and social goals The chapters in this book were originally published as special issues of International Review of Applied Economics
