to the same outcomes Despite calls for increased accountability police departments have successfully stonewalled change In The Policing Machine Tony Cheng reveals the stages of that resistance offering a close look at the deep engagement strategies that NYPD precincts have developed with only subsets of the community in order to counter any truly meaningful democratic oversight Cheng spent nearly two years in an unprecedented effort to understand the who and how of police community relationship building in New York City documenting the many ways the police strategically distributed power and privilege within the community to increase their own public legitimacy without sacrificing their organizational independence By setting up community councils that are conveniently run by police allies handing out favors to local churches that will promote the police to their parishioners and offering additional support to institutions friendly to the police the NYPD like police departments all over the country cultivates political capital through a strategic politics that involves distributing public resources offering regulatory leniency and deploying coercive force The fundamental challenge with police community relationships Cheng shows is not to build them It is that they already exist and are motivated by a machinery designed to stymie reform Individual Employment Rights Cases, 2002 West's Federal Supplement, 2002 Cases decided in the United States district courts United States Court of International Trade and rulings of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation Document Retrieval Index, 1976 Innovative Policing Asongwe N.
