

Connection help

Don't know if you're connecting to router or extender?

The extender's status LEDs are designed to give you a visual cue as to whether it's connected to your hub/router or to your sub-router. It's your choice that controls which signal it connects to.

Can't connect extender to router

- If the range lights continue to blink (on & off) for more than 10 minutes after connection attempts, check your router or sub-router to ensure existing network power is on.
- If your router offers two internal access points and the extender has two (on & off) lights, increasing the router's power will increase the extender's range.
- If you're trying to use WPS to connect to work (see fig. 1) and the WPS function in the extender continues to flash, it may be that it's incompatible with the WPS function in the router. To troubleshoot the extender (off) (see On and repeat step 1), it is difficult. Follow the steps in step 2 to reset the extender using the WPS function.
- If you're unable to connect using method 1, check you have selected the correct wireless network and you've entered the correct wireless key.

Can't connect to internet

- Check your router is connected to the internet and your Wi-Fi is working correctly.

Can't connect your devices to wireless

- Make sure your device is correctly set up to connect to your sub-router before trying to use the extender.
- Make sure all wires and cables of equipment are correctly connected to the wireless signal.
- Check the lights on your extender and make sure you're in Good range. If not, see the section "Move extender to optimum location".
- The following faults and settings will affect wireless performance:

All lights are off

- Check the power outlet is working and not overloaded.
- Check the extender is turned on (the LED light is on the top).
