

PHOTODUPLICATION OF 16 MILLIMETER FILM STRIPS WITH STRONG LIGHTS

The first step in the process of duplicating 16 millimeter film strips is to prepare the original film strip. This involves removing the film from its container and cleaning it thoroughly. The film should be placed in a container of water and allowed to soak for several minutes. This will help to remove any dirt or debris that may be on the surface of the film. Once the film is clean, it should be placed in a container of water and allowed to dry. This will help to prevent any damage to the film during the duplication process.

The next step in the process is to prepare the duplicating equipment. This involves setting up the duplicating machine and adjusting the settings to match the original film strip. The duplicating machine should be set to the correct speed and the film should be loaded into the machine. Once the machine is set up, the original film strip should be placed in the machine and the duplicating process can begin.

The duplicating process involves exposing the original film strip to a strong light. This light will create a negative of the original film strip. The negative can then be used to create a duplicate of the original film strip. This process can be repeated as many times as needed to create as many duplicates as required.

The final step in the process is to develop the duplicate film strip. This involves placing the duplicate film strip in a container of water and allowing it to develop for several minutes. This will help to reveal the image on the film strip. Once the film strip is developed, it can be used for its intended purpose.

The process of duplicating 16 millimeter film strips with strong lights is a simple and effective way to create duplicates of your original film strips. By following the steps outlined above, you can create high-quality duplicates of your original film strips.
