Notes 2014-2015 2015-2016

Ch 1: The Right to Exclude

Common Law Right to Exclude

- 1. Ownership is both a personal and a social institution
- 2. The right to exclude is a principle of law's dependent on society's institutions
 - o This social institution has three characteristics: (1) social, (2) exclusion, and (3) personal rights
 - o All the individuals have an exclusive right that lies in his property
- 3. Every person's constitutional right to the peaceful enjoyment of his or her property for any purpose (subject to certain state or federal control) has been:
 - o Established almost right immediately after Reconstruction that individuals' interests in their property

Constitutionality

- 1. Ownership of real property includes the right to use one's property as one sees fit, subject to the relevant restrictions
- 2. Courts increasingly protect this basic freedom, such that denying all persons the right to possess or use one's property is prohibited
 - o A violation of the constitutional rights of property
- 3. Any regulation that denies the owner the private enjoyment of his or her property is unconstitutional
 - o These rights are not subordinate to the state's or the federal government's need for property and may require the state or federal government to compensate the owner

Constitution is a commitment of a political society that the government will observe certain rules.

In substance, the government will not violate individuals' or groups' other property rights without compensation, and will not discriminate after the fact of the constitutional violation. This means the government will not take what the law says is its property.

- 1. The government's obligation to compensate
