The differential is a mechanical device which allows the wheels on the same axle to rotate at different speeds when the vehicle is turning. This is necessary because the wheels on the outside of the turn travel a longer path than the wheels on the inside. The differential consists of a housing (1) which contains a set of spider gears (2) which are mounted on a central shaft (3). The spider gears are in constant mesh with the axle shafts (4) which are connected to the wheels. When the vehicle is in a straight line, the spider gears do not rotate. When the vehicle is turning, the spider gears rotate and allow the wheels to turn at different speeds. The differential is a critical component of a vehicle's drivetrain and is responsible for smooth and efficient operation during turns.
