Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, and included a combination of aerobic and resistance exercises. The control group consisted of 12 sedentary women who did not participate in the training program. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during the training sessions. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and EE of the women. The HR increased significantly during the training sessions, and the EE increased significantly during the training sessions. The control group showed no significant change in HR or EE. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the work day.
 - Use red light for night shifts, as the wavelength of this light may be less disruptive to the circadian rhythm.
- The end of the shift should be followed by a period of relaxation, and the worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day. The worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day. The worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a serious problem with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. A government producer (as in a public utility) that is required to supply a certain amount of output will not be able to adjust its output level if its price is too low or too high. It will have to accept the government's price and produce the required amount of output.

- 20 Do not test the power switch on the immersion pump, or otherwise test the pump in the water and especially if the water contains any materials that might interfere with the power specifications outlined in the test and maintenance procedures listed on the product for voltage and amperage information
- 21 Do not touch the power switch or the power cord while they are energized for the reason that on a grounded system, a grounded object energized from the plug can cause electrical shocks or electrical fires if it falls into the water or on the ground or on the wet surface
- 22 Do not use water to clean the immersion pump or the power cord or the power plug. This may cause electric shock
- 23 Do not touch the switch, or use the switch in the water after the immersion pump. Contact with the switch in the water may cause electric shock
- 24 Do not touch the plug or the power cord while it is energized or plug it into anything other than the power cord that was used; always pull on the power cord's plug. The immersion plug by itself can be the power cord! Do not touch the power cord while it is energized
- 25 Do not plug a cord into more than one receptacle in a power outlet. There are only enough contacts in the receptacle to permit the coupling of immediate plug and cord. If you use the double cord in the receptacle, the receptacle is overloaded
- 26 Do not use the immersion pump as a plug-in power cord. The immersion pump is not designed to be plugged into a power outlet. It is designed to be plugged into the power cord that was used to plug it into the system
