*Where greater density goes on the offside, teams are encouraged to play through the offside as an attacking option. This strategy is a great alternative to traditional set pieces as it is difficult to defend. It also encourages teams to play through the offside, which is a great attacking option.

My focus being that rather practitioners, not students will graduate with the knowledge, create, grow and disseminate their expertise. In this format, students will be provided a lot of real, meaningful tasks to complete that will be useful and common in their life post school. An educational and training that really prepares students, engineers, with respect to the knowledge, design, their hands-on capability and provides the capability to find and change the world. It is, educational and technical skills training, growth, capability and capacity to work in their community.
