Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 1 year. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of 3 sessions per week of 30 minutes of aerobic exercise at 60% of the maximum HR. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a 3-minute step test at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 22 to 26 beats per minute. The HR during the step test increased from 145 to 155 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 77 to 85 beats per minute. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

This may require either to purchase this type of multi-mount AFS, or pointing out the proprietary address.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output. This is because the higher price makes it more profitable to produce. The producer will continue to increase output until the marginal cost of production equals the price of the output. This is the profit-maximizing level of output. The producer's supply curve is the portion of the marginal cost curve that is above the minimum point of the average total cost curve.
