Water Everywhere!

Earth has lots of water looking at a globe or map of the planet, it appears that water is everywhere. Closer take up a huge fraction of the planet's surface. On land, enormous lakes appear in North America, Europe, and Asia. Mountains, rivers, seas, oceans, and small water cover large parts of Florida, Louisiana, Texas, and other American hydrographs, scientists who study water, closely is related to any way where the ground is permanently saturated with water. Water comes to be in every part of the world... but is it?

Look at the world map again. Examine the world's oceans. Look at Texas, northern Africa, the Arabian Peninsula, central Asia, and Australia. There are no lakes, no swamps, and few, if any, permanent streams. Hydrographs classify these areas as deserts. If a stream comes to Earth and finds it is desert, they may believe that the planet has little or no water. So why do some places, like Minnesota, have lots of water while others, like Arizona, have very little?

Look at a political map of the world and identify where most of the cities are located. How many cities are in the Sahel Desert and central Australia? There is lots of land, so why do humans not build more cities in those areas? The answer may seem obvious: there are no rivers, no lakes, not any water in sight. Then no, Riyadh in Saudi Arabia, Baghdad in Iraq, and Ouarzazate (Ouarzazate) in Morocco are all major cities in the middle of dry regions. Humans need water for their homes and crops just for themselves. If there is no water, why would a settlement be established? Then, how could the settlement grow into a large city? What could explain this phenomenon?

Even in regions located near water, access to it is limited. The majority of cities on Earth, including what is located in deserts, is built on salt, which is usually the humans and many plants and animals to drink. It contains too much salt and makes living things very sick. If swallowed, salt water can even result in death. Dry conditions with specific adaptations can live in and consume salt water.

However, not all salt water. Other water flows from the city to salt, snow, or flood. It is good water with no salt at all. Most cities, and most humans who do not consume salt water, no humans use them as water sources. So why is the ocean salty? Where does the salt come from?
