

Plans for Reconstruction

As the Civil War raged, a cloud of gloom descended that there would be some difficulty reconstructing the South. Some believed upon Southern secession, a plan for Reconstruction by a series of military

These different proposals were made privately, and then formulated a reconstruction plan which the first president, Lincoln, adopted. The plan called for the South to be treated as a conquered state, and the 1863 Emancipation Proclamation was a step towards this goal. The Reconstruction Amendments Between 1865 and 1870, three amendments to the Constitution were ratified, which would become known as the Reconstruction Amendments. Rationally, they are the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments, which had major implications for the country as well as newly freed slaves. Much of the legislation that came after 1865 is credited to the work of the Radical Republicans, who favored abolition and did not hold to compromise or ending slavery. Despite Congressional support, there were many Southerners who were not in favor of these amendments, and they worked to increase the tensions that had begun after the Civil War.

The 13th Amendment passed in Congress on January 31, 1865, a few months before President Lincoln was assassinated. It was not formally ratified until December 6 of that year. The 14th Amendment is considered as the one which formally ended slavery in the United States.
