Airman's Guide ,1947 The Oxford Handbook of Names and Naming Carole Hough,2016-05-03 In this handbook scholars from around the world offer an up to date account of the state of the art in different areas of onomastics in a format that is both useful to specialists in related fields and accessible to the general reader Since Ancient Greece names have been regarded as central to the study of language and this has continued to be a major theme of both philosophical and linguistic enquiry throughout the history of Western thought The investigation of name origins is more recent as is the study of names in literature Relatively new is the study of names in society which draws on techniques from sociolinguistics and has gradually been gathering momentum over the last few decades The structure of this volume reflects the emergence of the main branches of name studies in roughly chronological order The first Part focuses on name theory and outlines key issues about the role of names in language focusing on grammar meaning and discourse Parts II and III deal with the study of place names and personal names respectively while Part IV outlines contrasting approaches to the study of names in literature with case studies from different languages and time periods Part V explores the field of socio onomastics with chapters relating to the names of people places and commercial products Part VI then examines the interdisciplinary nature of name studies before the concluding Part presents a selection of animate and inanimate referents ranging from aircraft to animals and explains the naming strategies adopted for them

Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide ,1893 Advances and Challenges in Pain Measurement Kenneth Craig,Loren Martin,Kai Karos,2023-08-18 Lord Kelvin William Thompson To measure is to know If you cannot measure it you cannot improve it Pain has proven elusive to definitive measurement in research and clinical settings While the experience is familiar to virtually everyone it also is recognized as complex and multidimensional Critiques of the field advise that pain is often unrecognized inadequately assessed and underestimated Unidimensional scales relying upon self report are commonly used both clinically and in research settings but they are vulnerable to presentation bias and they fail to capture the complexity of this multidimensional phenomenon In consequence there has been considerable interest and effort devoted to the generation of measures capable to capturing the experience for both research and clinical purposes Both behavioral and physiological approaches have been pursued Verbal behavior is represented by self report scales that vary in dimensionality typically seeking to represent sensory affective and cognitive features of the experience The status of self report scales as the gold standard for pain assessment has been questioned Nonverbal measures seek to capture behavioral activity ranging from facial expression through limb movements and gestures to posture Physiological measures are similarly wide ranging capitalizing on recent developments in brain imaging and novel approaches to autonomic regulation There also are efforts to fuse behavioral and physiological measures as a means of capturing the complexity of pain This series of papers seeks to represent the most recent conceptual and empirical advances in the important and rapidly advancing field of pain assessment and measurement We invite both reviews of the literature and research investigations advancing the field
