Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CG) and an exercise group (EG). The EG performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The CG did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a maximal exercise test at baseline and after 12 weeks. The EG showed a significant decrease in HR at rest and during the maximal exercise test, and a significant increase in HRR at rest and during the maximal exercise test, compared to the CG. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and HRR of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
 - Use red light for night time. Red light has the least effect on the circadian clock.
- The end of the light period is important. The way the light is turned off is critical. The producer should be practicing a gradual dimming of the lights. The lights should be dimmed over a 15-minute period. The lights should be turned off at least 15 minutes before the end of the day.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. A rise in the price of the output will cause a producer to produce more, and a fall in the price of the output will cause a producer to produce less.
