

Sample Reflective Essay

Author: Nekisa Mahzad

I have been a student at California State University Channel Islands (CI) for 5 semesters, and over the course of my stay I have grown and learned more than I thought possible. I came to this school from Moorpark Community College already knowing that I wanted to be an English teacher; I had taken numerous English courses and though I knew exactly what I was headed for-was I ever wrong. Going through the English program has taught me so much more than stuff about literature and language, it has taught me how to be me. I have learned here how to write and express myself, how to think for myself, and how to find the answers to the things that I don't know. Most importantly I have learned how important literature and language are.

When I started at CI, I thought I was going to spend the next 3 years reading classics, discussing them and then writing about them. That was what I did in community college English courses, so I didn't think it would be much different here. On the surface, to an outsider, I am sure that this is what it appears that C.I. English majors do. In most all my classes I did read, discuss, and write papers; however, I quickly found out that that there was so much more to it. One specific experience I had while at C.I. really shows how integrated this learning is. Instead of writing a paper for my final project in Perspectives of Multicultural Literature (ENGL 449), I decided with a friend to venture to an Indian reservation and compare it to a book we read by Sherman Alexie. We had a great time and we learned so much more that we ever could have done from writing a paper. The opportunity to do that showed me that there are so many ways that one can learn that are both fun and educational.

The English courses also taught me how powerful the written word and language can be. Words tell so much more than a story. Stories tell about life and the human condition, they bring up the past and people and cultures that are long gone. Literature teaches about the self and the world surrounding the self. From these classes I learned about the world, its people and its history; through literature I learned how we as humans are all related. By writing about what we learn and/or what we believe, we are learning how to express ourselves.

I know that my ability to write and express my ideas, thoughts and knowledge has grown stronger each semester. I have always struggled to put my thoughts on paper in a manner that is coherent and correct according to assignments. I can remember being told numerous times in community college to "organize your

Mathematics is the science of acts without things and through this of things one can define by acts 1 Paul Val ry The essays collected in this volume form a mosaik of theory research and practice directed at the task of spreading mathematical knowledge They address questions raised by the recurrent observation that all too frequently the present ways and means of teaching mathematics generate in the student a lasting aversion against numbers rather than an understanding of the useful and sometimes enchanting things one can do with them Parents teachers and researchers in the field of education are well aware of this dismal situation but their views about what causes the wide spread failure and what steps should be taken to correct it have so far not come anywhere near a practicable consensus The authors of the chapters in this book have all had extensive experience in teaching as well as in educational research They approach the problems they have isolated from their own individual perspectives Yet they share both an overall goal and a specific fundamental conviction that characterized the efforts about which they write here The common goal is to find a better way to teach mathematics The common conviction is that knowledge cannot simply be transferred ready made from parent to child or from teacher to student but has to be actively built up by each learner in his or her own mind Short Papers in the Geologic and Hydrologic Sciences,
