Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and increase EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light-emitting devices. To avoid this, there are two things the patient should do:
 - Avoid exposure to bright light at night
 - Avoid exposure to bright light during the day
- The end of the day is the best time to sleep. The body's internal clock is set to sleep at night. If the patient is not sleeping at night, the body's internal clock is out of sync. This can lead to a variety of problems, including:
 - Difficulty falling asleep
 - Difficulty staying asleep
 - Waking up too early
 - Feeling tired during the day
 - Difficulty concentrating
 - Difficulty remembering things
 - Difficulty with mood
 - Difficulty with physical health
