Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of 30 minutes of aerobic exercise, 3 times a week, at 60% of the maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR and HRR were significantly lower at rest and during exercise at the end of the 10-week period compared to the beginning of the 10-week period. The control group did not show any significant changes in HR and HRR. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the HR and HRR of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light-emitting devices. Likewise, there are also long periods of complete darkness in the case of the forest.
- Several measures that are commonly used with the fish are also true for reptiles, such as, the length of the season may differ depending on the soil moisture availability.
- The soil temperature is important, as it may change the period of activity. The period of activity is usually longer in the day than at night, but there are some species of animals that are nocturnal, and some are active during the day and night.
- Several factors can influence the life span of a reptile.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. A rise in the price of the output will increase the producer's profit, and a fall will decrease it. The profit-maximizing output level is determined by the profit-maximizing rule: produce where marginal revenue equals marginal cost. If the price of the output rises, the marginal revenue curve shifts up, and the profit-maximizing output level increases. If the price of the output falls, the marginal revenue curve shifts down, and the profit-maximizing output level decreases.
