In 1912 the British Captain Robert Falcon Scott and his men were caught in a fierce snowstorm and perished while returning to their base camp, after reaching the South Pole. Their tent, buried under snow was discovered the following year by Sir Ernest. He handed over a letter written by Scott to his author - friend, James Barvie. After describing the snowstorm and their impending doom, Scott wrote that he and his colleagues were spending the time singing songs and making pleasant conversations. Below these lines he had also written in bold letters, one word- COURAGE. When he returned to England, the letter was handed over to Sir James Barvie who read it and kept it in a box.

A few years later Sir James developed some defect in his right hand because of which he could not hold a pen. The author despaired of ever being able to write again. One day, in a despondent mood, he took out Scott's letter and read it again. It lifted his spirits and set him thinking. If Scott and his men could remain cheerful in the face of death, could he too not learn to face adversity bravely? He picked up his pen and began practicing writing with his left hand. In a few weeks he could write perfectly well with it and he thought he would write again when pigs fly.

Student and Teacher Writing Motivational Beliefs Steve Graham, Gary A. Troia, Gustaf Bernhard Uno Skar, 2024-06-21. The study of students' motivational beliefs about writing and how such beliefs influence writing has increased since the publication of John Hays' 1996 model of writing. This model emphasized that writers' motivational beliefs influence how and what they write. Likewise, increased attention has been devoted in recent years to how teachers' motivational beliefs about writing, especially their efficacy to teach writing, impact how writing is taught and how students progress as writers. As a result, there is a need to bring together in a Research Topic studies that examine the role and influence of writing beliefs. Historically, the psychological study of writing has focused on what students write or the processes they apply when writing. Equally important but investigated less often are studies examining how writing is taught and how teachers' efforts contribute to students' writing. What has been less prominent in the psychological study of writing are the underlying motivational beliefs that drive or inhibit students' writing or serve as catalysts for teachers' actions in the classroom when teaching writing. This Research Topic will bring together studies that examine both students' and teachers' motivational beliefs about teaching writing. This will include studies examining the operation of such beliefs, how they develop, cognitive and affective correlates, how writing motivational beliefs can be fostered, and how they are related to students' writing achievement. By focusing on both students' and teachers' beliefs, the Research Topic will provide a more nuanced and broader picture of the role of motivation beliefs in writing and writing instruction. This Research Topic includes papers that address students' motivational beliefs about writing, teachers' motivational beliefs about writing or teaching writing. Students' motivational beliefs about writing include beliefs about the value and utility of writing, writing competence, attitudes toward writing, goal orientation, motives for writing, identity, epistemological underpinnings, writing and attributions for success/failure, as examples. Teacher motivational beliefs include these same judgements as well as beliefs about their preparation and their students' competence and progress as writers, to provide additional examples. This Research Topic is interested in papers that examine how such beliefs operate, develop, are related to other cognitive and affective variables, how they are impacted by instruction and how they are related to students writing performance Submitted studies can include original research both quantitative qualitative or mixed methods meta analysis and reviews of the literature
