Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. The control group showed no significant change in HR and BP. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

- Day and night temperatures that are longer than the standard atmospheric conditions will negatively affect the rate of decomposition of organic materials. Likewise, materials that are far from the ground surface (e.g., in the trunk of a tree).
- Ground moisture affects the rate of decomposition. Wet soil has more water in it, so water is a good conductor, the length of the soil mass may differ depending on the soil moisture characteristics.
- The soil's pH affects the rate of decomposition. The more basic the soil, the faster the process of decomposition. In acidic soils, decomposition is slower. Soil is not suitable for these purposes if it is acidic, stony, sandy, too moist or too dry (50% to 90% water).
