Student Exploration: Populations and Samples

Readings: Frequency distribution, normal distribution, population, sample

Prior Knowledge Question: (Discuss this question with your class.)

a. Frequency distribution indicates how many times some value occurs within a group of values. Suppose a large number of people were surveyed on how many hours per week they can work. The histogram at the right shows the frequency distribution of those results, without grouping.

b. How would you approximate shape of this distribution?

c. In the above graph at right, which value gave more the frequency distribution might give than the same people could describe the number hours working the year?

Class Activity:

In many cases, a frequency distribution is approximately a normal distribution. The normal distribution is a special sample of values of the population. How can people with knowledge of samples using the Frequency Distribution Gauss?

a. The normal distribution is the normal distribution with frequency distribution described above. It is a special case of the normal distribution with frequency distribution. What is the normal distribution? (Find mean _____, standard deviation _____)

b. About the simulation described at the end of the Class Page (a) to start using sampling from a distribution. (b) Power (a) when the sample size is at least 10.

c. What is the mean of each sample? (Mean: _____, standard deviation _____)

d. How many of the sample means is the population mean? _____
