1. The first step in the process of identifying a research problem is to determine the general area of interest. This involves a broad search of the literature to identify key concepts and theories. The next step is to narrow down the focus of the study by identifying specific research questions or hypotheses. This is often done by reviewing existing research and identifying gaps or areas for further exploration. The final step is to develop a research plan that outlines the methods and procedures that will be used to collect and analyze data. This plan should be flexible enough to allow for adjustments as the research progresses.
