

Eagle Scout Recommendation Letter

To Whom It May Concern,

It is a source of great pride and joy to compose this Eagle Scout letter of recommendation my dear friend Mark Sheridan. I have known Mr. Sheridan for the past seven years, as he is a good friend of my nephew in school and we live in the same neighborhood.

Mr. Sheridan is a reputable, reliable and trustworthy person, as evidenced by the manner in which he lives his life. He carries out his daily activities diligently and with such honesty and takes pride in his work. He is known as a man of his word; a person of integrity. Mr. Sheridan is not one to turn his back on a neighbor in need.

I believe that he is an eligible candidate for an Eagle Scout since he lives his life in accordance with the principles set by the Eagle Scout.

Rest assured that the contents of this letter was kept strictly confidential and created for the eyes only of the members of the Eagle Scout Board of Review. Neither are the contents of the letter discussed with the candidate before or after the time that of completion.

Sincerely,

Mr. George Florsheim

Department of State, 1994 The American Non-Dilemma Nancy DiTomaso, 2013-01-17 The Civil Rights movement of the 1960s seemed to mark a historical turning point in advancing the American dream of equal opportunity for all citizens regardless of race Yet 50 years on racial inequality remains a troubling fact of life in American society and its causes are highly contested In The American Non-Dilemma sociologist Nancy DiTomaso convincingly argues that America's enduring racial divide is sustained more by whites preferential treatment of members of their own social networks than by overt racial discrimination Drawing on research from sociology political science history and psychology as well as her own interviews with a cross section of non-Hispanic whites DiTomaso provides a comprehensive examination of the persistence of racial inequality in the post-Civil Rights era and how it

plays out in today's economic and political context Taking Gunnar Myrdal's classic work on America's racial divide The American Dilemma as her departure point DiTomaso focuses on the white side of the race line To do so she interviewed a sample of working middle and upper class whites about their life histories political views and general outlook on racial inequality in America While the vast majority of whites profess strong support for civil rights and equal opportunity regardless of race they continue to pursue their own group based advantage especially in the labor market where whites tend to favor other whites in securing jobs protected from market competition This opportunity hoarding leads to substantially improved life outcomes for whites due to their greater access to social resources from family schools churches and other institutions with which they are engaged DiTomaso also examines how whites understand the persistence of racial inequality in a society where whites are on average the advantaged racial group Most whites see themselves as part of the solution rather than part of the problem with regard to racial inequality Yet they continue to harbor strong reservations about public policies such as affirmative action intended to ameliorate racial inequality In effect they accept the principles of civil rights but not the implementation of policies that would bring about greater racial equality DiTomaso shows that the political engagement of different groups of whites is affected by their views of how civil rights policies impact their ability to provide advantages to family and friends This tension between civil and labor rights is evident in Republicans use of anti civil rights platforms to attract white voters and in the efforts of Democrats to bridge race and class issues or civil and labor rights broadly defined As a result DiTomaso finds that whites are at best uncertain allies in the fight for racial equality Weaving together research on both race and class along with the life experiences of DiTomaso's interview subjects The American Non Dilemma provides a compelling exploration of how racial inequality is reproduced in today's society how people come to terms with the issue in their day to day experiences and what these trends may signify in the contemporary political landscape
