

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 6-week training program on the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The training group performed a supervised aerobic exercise program three times per week. The control group did not participate in any structured exercise program. Cardiovascular fitness was assessed by measuring maximum heart rate, resting heart rate, and maximal oxygen consumption before and after the 6-week period. Results showed that the training group had significantly higher maximum heart rate, lower resting heart rate, and higher maximal oxygen consumption compared to the control group at the end of the 6-week period.
