Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CG) and an exercise group (EG). The EG performed a 12-week training program consisting of 3 sessions per week of 30 min of aerobic exercise at 70% of their maximum HR. The CG remained sedentary. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a 30-min submaximal exercise test at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The EG showed a significant decrease in HR at rest and during exercise, and a significant increase in HRR at rest and during exercise, compared to the CG. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or non-natural light sources. Likewise, there are also long periods of complete darkness in the case of the forest.
- Several measures therefore will come with the use of the standard time specifications, the length of the day and night being determined by the local country regulations.
- The end of the day is determined by the way that the day is defined. The problem is, therefore, defining the end of the day. The problem is, therefore, defining the end of the day. The problem is, therefore, defining the end of the day.
- Several, but not consistent, measures are used to define the end of the day.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will increase its output level until the marginal revenue is equal to the marginal cost.
