Learning from mistakes

Three months have passed since I first started the ethnography project. During the three month, I have studied and researched about an aviation fraternity called Alpha Eta Rho (AHP) and participating aviation students in University of Illinois. The project opened up an opportunity to meet people whose career field is drastically different from my own. As I expected, they were not romanticists who want to fly away like some E.T. character, but determined individuals with strong willpower and firm. At least once in his or her lifetime, everyone has a dream, whether the dream turns out to be unachievable or flaccid. In order to achieve the dream, one requires firm determination that helps to surmount all the obstacles one may face in the process.

I remember with embarrassment, that in the beginning, I was clueless to how I should approach this project. I was ignorant to the fact that there are two kinds of AHP meeting: official and unofficial meeting. The official AHP meeting is held every other Thursday at 7 P.M, and unofficial meeting, called "hang-out day", is held on Thursdays that do not have a scheduled meeting. When I attended the AHP official meeting for the first time, I was confused. Not knowing exactly what I needed to do, I did not know I needed to take notes even on tedious talks. As a result, I had really hard time writing the final paper; I had to squeeze out any possible information from my memory and the tape recorder I brought to the meeting. As it turns out, tape-recording everything at all was unintentional yet immensely fortunate move. As time passed by, I saw other students' field notes, which included every single tiny detail. From this experience, I learned to know how to take a "good" field note. The field description I had taken previous to the spring break and after the break shows great improvement in observations. As the first two pages in the portfolio reveal, I only involved myself in new light on both the positive and negative aspects of experimental writing and its attempts to redefine the writing disciplines. Additionally, she shows how current debates over the value of multimedia texts echo earlier arguments that pitted experimental writing against traditional models. Sullivan further articulates the ways that multimedia is and isn't changing composition pedagogies and provides insights into resolving these tensions.

Chinese Students' Writing in English Maria Leedham, 2014-08-27 Chinese students are the largest international student group in UK universities today yet little is known about their undergraduate writing and the challenges they face. Drawing on the British Academic Written English corpus, a large corpus of proficient undergraduate student writing collected in the UK in the early 2000s, this study explores Chinese students' written assignments in English in a range of university disciplines, contrasting these with assignments from British students. The study is supplemented by questionnaire and interview datasets with discipline lecturers, writing tutors, and students, and provides a comprehensive picture of the Chinese student writer today. Theoretically framed through work within academic literacies and lexical priming, the author seeks to explore what we know about Chinese students' writing and to extend these findings to undergraduate writing more generally. In a globalized educational environment, it is important for educators to understand differences in writing styles across the student body and to move from the widespread deficit model of student writing towards a descriptive model which embraces different ways of achieving success. Chinese Students Writing in English will be of value to researchers, EAP tutors, and university lecturers teaching Chinese students in the UK, China, and other English or Chinese speaking countries.

Handbook of Research on Teaching Diverse Youth Literature to Pre-Service Professionals Hartsfield, Danielle E., 2021-06-25 Perspectives and identity are typically reinforced at a young age, giving teachers the responsibility of selecting reading material that could potentially change how the child sees the world. This is the importance of sharing diverse literature with today's children and young adults, which introduces them to texts that deal with religion, gender, identities, racial identities, socioeconomic conditions, etc. Teachers and librarians play significant roles in placing diverse books in the hands of young readers. However, to achieve the goal of increasing young people's access to diverse books, educators and librarians must receive quality instruction on this topic within their university preparation programs. The Handbook of Research on Teaching Diverse Youth Literature to Pre-Service Professionals is a comprehensive reference source that curates promising practices that teachers and librarians are currently applying to prepare aspiring teachers and librarians for sharing and teaching diverse youth literature. Given the importance of sharing diverse books with today's young people, university educators must be aware of engaging and effective methods for teaching diverse literature to pre-service teachers and librarians. Covering topics such as syllabus development, diversity, social justice, and activity planning, this text is essential for university-level teacher educators, library educators who prepare pre-service teachers and librarians, university educators, faculty adjunct instructors, researchers, and students.
