Bibliographic Essay

This bibliographic essay is a selective compilation and annotation of existing literature on drug-control policy. It includes both historical and relevant contemporary literature. With the exception of two Ph.D. dissertations and a number of articles, the emphasis is upon books written largely by scholars and journalists that elucidate the history of drug policy in the United States and other countries. Readers who are interested in pursuing further any particular topic or theme are directed to the notes in the works cited here and in the six articles in this volume. I have chosen not to include pertinent government documents, but researchers should be aware of the harvest of information on drug policy that is provided by the U.S. government in the form of congressional hearings and reports, Department of State publications, and reports by the General Accounting Office.

A modern history of international drug control remains to be written. Thematically suggestive, however, is Arnold H. Taylor, American Diplomacy and the Narcotics Traffic, 1900–1939: A Study in International Humanitarian Reform (Durham, N.C., 1969). Taylor demonstrates that, despite the worthy objective of international control, political and economic considerations often prevented interested powers from adopting effective anti-narcotics accords. No author has addressed domestic constraints on drug policy more authoritatively than David F. Musto, M.D., in The American Disease: Origins of Narcotic Control (New Haven, 1973; expanded ed., New York, 1987). Musto's book remains the starting place for all who write about U.S. drug policy.

Nearly as influential as Musto is David T. Courtwright, Dark Paradise: Opiate Addiction in America before 1940 (Cambridge, Mass., 1982);

Open-Access, Multimodality, and Writing Center Studies Elisabeth H. Buck, 2017-11-16 The disciplinary triad of open access multimodality and writing center studies presents a timely critical lens for discussing academic publishing in a moment of crucibilic change where rapid technological advancements force scholars and institutions to question what is produced and counts as academic writing Using historiographic quantitative and qualitative analysis Open Access Multimodality and Writing Center Studies sees writing center scholarship as a microcosm of many of the larger issues at play in the contemporary academic publishing landscape This case study approach reveals the complex imbricated ways that questions about publishing manifest both within the content of journals and as related to academics perceptions as signifiers of disciplinary visibility identity and transformation More than just reaffirming the conventional wisdom about these changes in publishing that these shifts are happening and we do not always know how to pinpoint them Open Access Multimodality and Writing Center Studies suggests that scholars in all fields compositionists and writing center practitioners be conscious of the ways they are complicit in maintaining barriers to accessibility and innovation Chapter 5 of this book is available open access under a CC BY 4.0 license at link.springer.com

Genre Knowledge in Disciplinary Communication Carol Berkenkotter,Thomas N. Huckin,2016-05-06 Although genre studies abound in literary criticism researchers and scholars interested in the social contexts of literacy have recently become interested in the dynamic rhetorical dimensions of speech genres Within this burgeoning scholarly community the authors are among the first researchers working within social science traditions to study genre from the perspective of the implicit knowledge of language users Thus this is the first sociocognitive study of genre using case study naturalistic research methods combined with the techniques of rhetorical and discourse analysis The term genre knowledge refers to an individual s repertoire of situationally appropriate responses to recurrent situations from immediate encounters to distanced communication through the medium of print and more recently the electronic media One way to study the textual character of disciplinary knowledge is to examine both the situated actions of writers and the communicative systems in which disciplinary actors participate These two perspectives are presented in this book The authors studies of disciplinary communication examine operations of systems as diverse as peer review in scientific publications and language in a first grade science classroom The methods used include case study and ethnographic techniques rhetorical and discourse analysis of changing features within large corpora and in the texts of individual writers Through the use of these techniques the authors engaged in both micro level and macro level analyses and developed a perspective which reflects both foci From this perspective they propose that what micro level studies of actors situated actions frequently depict as individual processes can also be interpreted from the macro level as communicative acts within a discursive network or system The research methods and the theoretical framework presented are designed to raise provocative questions for scholars researchers and teachers in a number of fields linguists who teach and conduct research in ESP and LSP and are interested in methods for studying professional communication scholars in the fields of communication rhetoric and sociology of science with an interest in the textual dynamics of scientific and scholarly communities educational researchers interested in cognition in context and composition scholars interested in writing in the disciplines
