Patient Interview Reflection Paper 2

Overall, I believe I saw improvement in the standardized patient interview. This interview had a new aspect introduced of motivational interviewing. I was able to exhibit the skills important in interviewing and communication. I began the interview with rapport building by greeting the patient with my name and asking the patient how her day was. I then structured the interview by telling the patient what would occur during the appointment. I did ask the patient's main concern but do believe that I could have worked on asking the patient about their health values and beliefs more to get a more comprehensive background of the patient. In regard to nonverbal communication, I maintained a comfortable distance from the patient and maintained eye contact while facing the patient directly. The patient did say in the feedback session that they felt that I appeared interested in what the patient said and cared for her. She also perceived the empathy that I expressed. As far as word choice, I deliberately avoided jargon and attempted to use appropriate language. I do believe I could improve on the area of asking for understanding of the patient.

Reflecting on my motivational interviewing skills, there are areas of improvement I can work on. I attempted to use open-ended questions but could certainly incorporate more open-ended questions. I used a few affirmations acknowledging the patient's willpower to stop smoking. I believe I could have also used more affirmations. I reflected treatments outside of those gathered in traditional patient reported outcome questionnaires Qualitative interviews can capture patients perceptions of treatment needs more fully explore meaningful changes experienced as a result of treatment and reveal outcomes that are most important to patients Asking patients detailed questions can provide insight into the why of a patient s expressed thought or feeling The inclusion of patient interviews within clinical trials is a relatively new and evolving field of research This article delineates the types of data that may be collected during interviews with clinical trial participants and outlines two approaches to conducting qualitative research in the clinical trial setting with a focus on maximizing the value of the resulting data

Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings Ronald H. Rozensky, Jerry J. Sweet, Steven M. Tovian, 2013-06-29 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon's General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book
